

Australians breaking new ground

Foam submarines, bees with backpacks and cyclone-proof housing made of recycled plastic. Just three of many life-changing inventions created, designed and developed in Australia.

Read More

Hacking Tech To Bring Healthcare To The World

Australian scientist David Putrino mixes physiotherapy, neuroscience and technology to develop low-cost healthcare solutions that are easily accessible for under-served people around the world. He has helped design prosthetic arms for refugees in war-torn South Sudan and developed affordable virtual reality rehabilitation devices that can be purchased online.

read more

Bees with backpacks: micro-sensors help solve global honey bee decline

Discover how Australian scientists are using pioneering tracking technology to save the world's honey bees and protect global food security.

read more