Austrade's Privacy Policy

Austrade generally collects your personal information directly from you. However, in some circumstances we collect personal information about you from someone else such as where you have authorised us to do so, where the information is on a publicly available source (eg by way of a company search), where it is necessary for a consular function or where it is unreasonable or impracticable to collect the information from you such as in the case of a medical opinion.

We may collect your personal information in a variety of ways including by phone, in writing, via our website when you provide information on online forms or through signing-up to a subscription.

For detail on how Austrade collects personal information and for what purposes, the click stream data Austrade collects, and how Austrade uses cookies on its websites please refer to Austrade's privacy policy
